Building Peace Through Policy

Research and Policy Advice

The world is at a key inflection point in history. It is dealing with an interconnected set of threats and challenges that call for renewed focus on security challenges and the development of innovative solutions. To better understand these issues, the GCSP provides research and policy advice that help leaders to reshape the international system and look over the horizon to anticipate, explain, and prepare for emerging risks and challenges.

To this end, we provide timely, relevant, and usable insights to our community and specific clients. We monitor policy and technological developments that impact international peace, security, and strategic stability; analyse their implications; and provide early warning, strategic anticipation, and policy-relevant advice. Leveraging our in-house and global expertise, we develop policy recommendations and advise decision-makers on key problematic issues.

We leverage our expertise and networks to develop evidence-based policy that address pressing security challenges.

We make sense of modern security affairs:

Revived great-power competition, emerging and disruptive technologies, new forms of warfare, challenges to multilateralism, war in Europe, and regional conflicts are leading to new challenges to international peace and security. This calls for new conceptualisations of and approaches to security. The GCSP does this by focusing on future-oriented security policy and exploring avenues for renewed cooperation on peace and security.

We provide tailor-made advice:

We aim to develop analytical products and strengthen partnerships with governments, regional and international organisations, think tanks, NGOs, academic institutions, and the private sector. Our products help these actors to better understand the international peace and security environment, equipping them to anticipate and respond to the challenges and opportunities that may lie ahead.

We create knowledge, insights and ideas:

With our diverse range of publications, events, expert workshops, and tailored products, we are a go-to place for expertise, analysis, and advice on security policy. Our work is particularly relevant to our core partners, Geneva-based partners, and the private sector in terms of risk and strategic forecasting, arms control, disruptive technologies, the impact of climate change on security, and crisis management, among other currently relevant issues.

Engage With Us

International peace and security are currently fragile. Trust is eroding, divisions are deepening and misunderstandings are on the rise. The GCSP's work is critical in response to this situation.

The support of partners and donors is vital for us to offer activities that unite diverse stakeholders to develop ideas, policy options, and solutions. Thus, we can all contribute to shaping a resilient global order to advance peace, cooperation and sustainable security.

The roles of partnerships and donors are closely interlinked. Partners commission and fund specific projects, while other donors may direct their contributions to be used more broadly to financially support individuals or activities. We work carefully to ensure we meet all partner and donor priorities to maximise the impact of their support in a variety of ways.
